Introductory Statistics is designed for the one-semester, introduction to statistics course and is geared toward students majoring in fields other than math or engineering. This text assumes students have been exposed to intermediate algebra, and it focuses on the applications of statistical knowledge rather than the theory behind it. The foundation of this textbook is Collaborative Statistics, by Barbara Illowsky and Susan Dean. Additional topics, examples, and ample opportunities for practice have been added to each chapter. The development choices for this textbook were made with the guidance of many faculty members who are deeply involved in teaching this course. These choices led to innovations in art, terminology, and practical applications, all with a goal of increasing relevance and accessibility for students. We strove to make the discipline meaningful, so that students can draw from it a working knowledge that will enrich their future studies and help them make sense of the world around them. Its theme is to: encourage everyone to know their statistical level since the health of a society is becoming increasingly dependent on its statistical literacy, and how statistics is practiced; encourage statisticians to practice that a statistical analysis aims not to provide a single answer, but a choice of answers (answers by several methods for the same problem). Therefore a framework for comparing answers, and integrating classical and modern statistical methods, is required.
