This East African folktale is about a young mouse who thinks he's "the strongest animal on the plains" but after his grandfather tells him elephant is the strongest, he goes out on an adventure to find elephant. I didn't really care for this story because the young mouse doesn't really learn his lesson. flag

Farris's first book is an East African tale about a strong young mouse who wants to test his strength on Elephant. While he seeks out the great beast, the mouse frightens a lizard, a zebra, and a giraffe; readers will know that his feats are pure accidents, for his actions coincide with the thunder and lightning of an approaching storm.
